with money, but search of his effects after he was discovered in his room with a bullet in his brain did not reveal a dollar. He was buried at public expense after his body had been kept a month and viewed by hundreds in an attempt to learn who he was. Even after burial attempts were made to trace his relatives, and the body was once disinterred at request of members of a titled English family in search of a

The police took pictures of his face after death, and these enabled the law-yer to identify Turner. The body will be sent to England as soon as certain necessary details have been arranged with the British Consul.

The lawyer said that Turner had received money from relatives after he left home. He thought that Turner killed himself after receiving a letter from a brother in which further financial aid was refused. A large sum in life insurance is involved in the case, according to the attorney.

Proprietor Phoebus, of the Wiltshire, went before the British Consul in Philadelphia and certified to the manner of Turner's death. It is believed that the name Turner is not exactly correct, but all persons concerned are pledged to secrecy and refuse to discover has positively identified by phase.
